ARAB FELICITY. Travelling in the East is no child's play; an indomitable will and a good constitution are essential requisites. The pretty, sentimental notions of golden sands and sparkling waters, picked up in our childhood, are Analysis by Dr. R. H. Stabler. speedily dissipated under drenching rains, burning suns, and pinching night frosts .-Let us hear the account of a traveller:

We were in a sorry plight when we reached the Bedouin encampment, and were politely met by the chief man of the camp, who bade us welcome to his tent. How often in my youth have I dreamed of a Bedouin encampment, and imagined the rural simplicity and beauty of such a life! And then now Olney's Geography had heightened the little Arab children caressing a tame horse, while the patriarchal Arab, his wife, and daughter, were sitting quietly at the tent door at sunset, and scattered all around were camels reposing and colts gamboling! Like other pleasing impressions of childhood, this, also, was dispelled by actual experience. The encampment which now gave us refuge was planted on a rich black soil, which, owing to the rain and the trampling of human and beastial feet, had been converted into a muddy slough. The tents were low and around each door were dirty children paddling in puddles, and snarling curs fighting over bones.

Heavily for us over tent was on the out-

Happily for us, our tent was on the outskirts, and, if Ibrahim told the truth, was the largest and most regal in the whole cucampment. It was just about fifteen feet long Sulphurie Acid..... by ten wide, made of goats' hair, and so low as hardly to admit of our standing upright. A huge fire blazed exactly in the centre, and the smoke was suffered to make its way out as it could, by the doorway, under the edges of the tent, or through the gaps above. The only way to keep from suffocating w asto lie flat on our backs, which we did, with our feet to the fire, being arranged like the spokes of a wheel. We ourselves occupied one half of the circle, our host, his wives and children, and a great multitude of guests, attracted by curiosity, occupying the other half, and choking up the doorway, about which there was a continual fight for precedence. Besides ourselves, the tent was quite choked up with the household and agricultural stuff of our rich host; and one sure containing four very active calves, which required all the vigilance of our host's elder wife to keep them within their prison .-Once, indeed, they did escape, and rushed like a "thunderbolt" (as some writers say of armies) through the serried ranks of specta- By Prof. Morfit, of New York, Amid all these difficulties we took our dinner, which excited the amazement of the crowd, and in the progress of which my only pair of boots were kicked into the fire by a careless spectator and burnt to a crisp.

After this we spent the evening in talking over the adventures of the day, and gossiping with our host's younger wife, who, jauntily dressed, seemed to have nothing to do but sit and scrutinize us carefully. The older wife was evidently the drudge, and what time she could spare from watching the calves, she spent in stirring vigorously her lord's broth.

The question as to how and where we were to sleep was a curious one. It was finally settled by an appropriation to our exclusive use of half the space usually occupied by the Arab and his family. They made their beds on the top of the household stuff, and we ours on the top of the agricultural implements .-As there was only room for five in a row close ly packed, I was compelled to take my position at their feet, with a cart-wheel for my pillow, and so subject to all the kicks which uneasy dreams are apt to produce. my feet burning in the fire, and my head freezing, while the rain kept dripping into my face from the leaky roof, there was no possi bility of sleep, and so I had the whole night to observe what was going on about me .--All night long the wind kept howling dreadfully, and the rain poured down without ceas-

On one side of the fire, in the centre of the tent, driven in by stress of weather, stood a cow and a donkey, keeping company with one of our muleteers, who had entered surreptitiously and uninvited. On the other side sat our host, bolt upright. Whether this was in honor of us, or through suspicion of us, I knownot; but there he sat all night-never stirred from his place, and never slept a wink. Now he would scratch himself very vigorous-ly, (for fleas abounded;) now he would bow his head to the ground, and mumble his prayers; now he would stretch out his long arms, and dip into the kettle of broth, and slap his stomach as he tasted the savory food. And then the scratching, and bowing, and mumbling, and dipping, would be gone over again in the same order; and so it went on till dawn, when the older wife arose, let out the calves, and filling up an undressed goat skin with curds, began to thrash it with a club-a way she had of making butter. This, of course waked up my five kicking companions, and the long night was ended. A strange night it was to your wakeful correspondent, lying there listening to the rain and wind, and thinking how far he was from all civilization, in a wild land, and among wild people. I thought of the Arab's salt, and felt secure; I thought more of the good Providence that was over us, and keeping us by night and by

SOMBRERO GUANO.

IN calling the attention of the public to this val-uable and recently discovered deposit of this fertilizing article, we will merely state, that like all other phosphatic GUANOS, its most valuable constituent is phosphoric acid, or bone phosphate of lime; and that its mercantile value, as compared with other GUANOS of its kind, may be easily determined by the amount of phosphoric acid or bone phosphate of lime it contains. In order, there-fore, to give the public a thorough knowledge of what SOMBRERO GUANO does contain, we beg to refer to the following list of eminent chemists in different parts of the world, who have analyzed different cargoes, from average samples taken by themselves from the cargoes just as they arrive corner was entirely monopolized by an enclo-sure containing four very active calves, which specimens for analyzation. Each analysis will be exhibited, if required, under the original signature of each chemist named:

Of phosphoric acid, estimated as equivalent to phosphate of lime, it is found to contain-79.70

Thus proving that the value of this GUANO is not determined by a SELECTED CHEMIST, or SELEC-TED SPECIMENS, or even SELECTED CARGOES, but an average of the importations just as they arrive, and just as they are offered to the public for sale. And for a like array of eminent authority, pro-miscuously obtained from promiscuous cargoes, in different parts of the world, we challenge a com-parison with any phosphatic GUANO now for sale. mb 16-eotf FOWLE & CO.
